

Tentative topic:
“The staff of the medical school – challenges and opportunities”

- Recruitment and training of staff
- How many of the staff in basic science subjects need to be medical doctors?
- Management of contracts of staff who have a hospital as well as a medical school appointment
- A problem of vital importance in many countries is the disparity between salaries paid to clinical staff at medical schools, and salaries for their colleagues in the health care system. It is difficult to recruit and motivate a professor of medicine when he or she will be paid less than other physicians doing similar clinical work in the same teaching hospital.

The Conference will examine these and many other important questions and promises to be of interest to everyone concerned with management of a medical school and its staff.

We look forward to welcoming you in Ljubljana in 2011.

Slovenia

Slovenia is surrounded by high Alps on north-west and the Adriatic Sea in the South. It is a land where Pannonian plains meet the mysterious Karst, where hills and valleys show off their intact nature. Mountains, lakes, waterfalls, forests, caves, green hills, plains, rivers and the sea - all on 20.273 km² of land. Beautiful nature is filled with historic and natural monuments.

The capital of Slovenia is Ljubljana, a charming city with an old centre where many beautiful masterpieces designed by famous architects can be seen. In summertime Ljubljana hosts a variety of different cultural events, so the city is always full of life. The coast offers clear sea, water sports and beautiful sights of nature and medieval towns, or taking a boat to nearby Venice. Making short trips across Slovenia is easy and there is a lot to see: historical towns, famous Lipica Stud Farm – the cradle of the Lipizzaner horse, the world famous Postojna cave, and more. Those who enjoy mountains, clear rivers and lakes should visit Bled, Bohinj, Soča river valley, Kranjska gora and hike to many of the nearby mountains. Slovenia is also known for its great wines and delicious traditional food that would satisfy even those with a discerning taste. For more information log on to <http://www.slovenia.info>.
