

Master's Program "PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION"

Ivane Javakhishvili Tbilisi State University in cooperation with the German University of Administrative Sciences Speyer

The first Master's program in Georgia with international accreditation provides the opportunity to acquire a Master's degree in Public Administration by studying within an interdisciplinary environment:

- Public law, economics, administrative science, political and social sciences
- Planning, decision-making, management, communication
- Implementation of policies and control of administrative action
- Structures and procedures of European integration
- Dealing with volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous environments
- Mastering scientific standards and academic writing

In 2009 the program was developed in close cooperation between German and Georgian scholars with the support of Volkswagen Foundation. It has been specifically adjusted to the explicit needs of the Georgian executive level.

The mission of the program is to train and prepare students for the leadership positions in the public sector by providing knowledge, skills and competences that can also be effectively used in the private sector in relation to public authorities. An essential objective of the program is to convey the core values of a citizen-friendly and the rule of law-based public administration in an open society.

Against this background, the program enables the participants to identify the different dimensions of tasks and problems. The graduates will be able to apply various disciplinary approaches and scientific methodologies when resolving problems and conceiving new solutions.
