This English-language program provides students with analytical skills, an interdisciplinary knowledge base, and practical understanding of the settings in which fast-evolving processes in our region take place. Designed for students who are interested in economic, social and political transformation in the South Caucasus, this program has a strong international focus. The program is created in close cooperation with prominent West European and US Universities. Students have unique chance to get Master's degree in Social Sciences adequate to Western standards of education. Graduates of the program will obtain academic degree: Master of Social Sciences, in the main field of study: Eurasian and Caucasus Studies. Ivane Javakhishvili Tbilisi State University will issues Diploma to graduates of the program. Diploma Supplement corresponds to the requirements of the Bologna Process for European Universities. Foreign students are also eligible to be enrolled or participate in the program.

The aim of the program is to advance research and scholarship in economic, social and political transformation of the South Caucasus region. To achieve this objective the programme takes an integrated approach to transformation studies. By integrated approach we mean: 1) looking at the transformation process through the lenses of different disciplines such as political science, international relations, economics, sociology, law and history; 2) combining theoretical, skills-oriented, and research courses in the curriculum. Additional objective of the program is to facilitate exchange of academic resources and promote research cooperation among the South Caucasus countries.

Students are instructed and supervised by TSU professors, local and international lecturers, Academic Fellowship Program fellows, professionals with work experience at international and local organizations. Guest lectures and workshops for students are regularly delivered by visiting professors from leading universities of Europe and North America. The language of instruction is English.

Program Structure and content:

The degree requires 120 ECTS credits and will take two calendar years (four semesters) from September 2013 to June 2015. The curriculum takes an integrated approach by combining theoretical and applied courses. In the first semester students are required to earn 30 ECTS credits in the second semesters students are required to earn 35 ECTS (total of 65 ECTS in both semesters, I Academic Year); in the third semester students are required to earn 20 ECTS of study program and in the fourth semester they are required to earn 5 ECTS. Totally the students have to earn 80 ECTS in study component through courses and seminars of the program. The students are encouraged to take internship in the third (fall) semester, and undergo intensive on-job training at the government agencies, local NGOs/think tanks, research institutes or international organizations. During whole III semester students work on their graduate thesis research proposal. In the beginning of fourth semester the Series of Seminars on Research Design will be provided. The seminars are obligatory, though do not earn any credits. The seminars will be concluded by the pre-defense/approbation of research proposal (March 2015). During the whole IV semester the students work closely with their research supervisor to prepare Graduate thesis. Theses must feature the students' own research, and be defended in late June (30 ECTS).

Classes are small (less than 20 students) and include lectures and seminars given by Georgian and international faculty who have considerable academic and practical experience working in Universities, NGOs, think tanks and Government. Teaching will be collaborative, student-centered and skill-based.

The program involves preparatory course in Academic Writing and Presentation Skills. Mandatory courses are delivered in I, II and III semesters and include: Quantitative Research Methods-introduction to Applied Statistics, Philosophy of Social Sciences, Qualitative Research Methods, Transformation in the South Caucasus, Post-Soviet Politics and Public Policy Analysis, International Peace and War, IR Theories. In the I, II and III semesters students have elective courses in Regional Conflict and Security in the South Caucasus, International Security, Post-Soviet Politics, History of European Integration, Foreign Policy Analysis, Culture and Identity in Changeable Society, International Organizations in the South Caucasus and EU Politics, Political History of the USSR, Research Methods in International Relations, Nationalism Studies: Theories and Practice, Research Methods in International Relations, Comparative Politics: From Authoritarianism to Democracy with Adjectives, European Neighborhood Policy, Foreign Policy of Russia, Political Problems of the Middle East, Remembering the Soviet Past in Georgia/ South Caucasus. In the third semester students are encouraged to take internship and start working on research proposal. At the beginning of IV semester, the students will have seminars on Research Design and they are required to submit and pass pre-defense of research proposal at the beginning of March 2015. The whole fourth semester is dedicated to MA thesis preparation and defense. About 30% of courses are cross-listed with TSU Master's program Diplomacy and International Relations.
