Aims

The aim of the two-year programme is to provide students with in-depth interdisciplinary knowledge of EU issues (law, politics, economy, history and culture), incorporating also Eastern European issues (present and expected links with EU). These students will become experts who have a thorough knowledge and understanding of the structure and operations of the economic, legal and political institutions of the European Union, and are familiar with decision – making at a European level, as well as the European integration process. Integration with the EU is on the top agenda of the Government of Georgia. The demand on Professionals on EU issues is increasing year after year. The graduates of MA program will be prepared to be hired in both Government and Private sectors.

Relevant of the Programme

The process of getting closer to the EU.

European integration is a positive and major feature of the new government’s foreign and economic policies. Europeanization of Georgia is yet at an initial stage but still, there is a strong conviction that Georgia is a European country. The European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) and ENP Action Plan (ENAP) marked a new approach for Georgia.

Whereas the EU is by far Georgia’s first economic partner, knowledge about the EU and its integration process, as well as the understanding of the meaning of the integration process between the EU and Georgia, of PCA, ENP, EaP are still very low in the country. Besides, Eastern Partnership dimension recently upgraded EU-Georgia relationship. This makes the training capacities in European studies in the country not only a crucial need, but also a strategic issue.

The development of European Studies, as a new academic field in Georgia, is not only a tool for a better understanding of the European Neighbour and of EU matters. It is also a major contribution to the building of competencies which are critical for efficient democracy and economy.

Through the new MAES will be implemented new teaching methods.

VIII. Methods to achieve learning outcomes:

In order to meet learning outcomes Masters program in European Studies is based on different teaching methods such as discussion, team work, problem based learning, case study, brain storming, mock court, power point presentations, EU simulation.

The courses are designed to be interactive and theory and practice oriented. Masters students are offered hypothetical case studies and multiple choice tests on each topic discussed to develop skills of applying European Standards in practice. The course uses comparative and systemic methods.

Different mock courts are organized i.e. students are divided into three parts analogous to the European Court of Human Rights (applicant, respondent and the Court).

One of the major aspects of the success of the learning process at the Institute for European Studies is EU simulation. An EU simulation is an innovative way to bring this knowledge to students. Similar to a Model UN program, EU simulations provide a better understanding of European integration and the constraints confronting EU member states, as well as a greater appreciation for cultural diversity. Students also acquire valuable skills such as public speaking, expository writing, the use of logic and reasoning, group negotiations and problem solving.

Lecture and seminars are the basic form of the teaching thought the program. Students are required to prepare theoretical materials, solve tasks, tests, exercises and etc. during semesters. At the lectures they also have the opportunity to participate in debates of the discussed questions. Different methods are used during teaching specific topics and problem-based learning. It often implies combining complementary methods.

During the semester one mid-term examination is to be conducted and evaluated by scores. The instructor demonstrates the facilitation skills to students during the first two days of classes. Each student must facilitate two one-hour discussion sessions using the facilitation methodology presented by instructor. The schedule for their facilitation sessions will be developed in detail. Each student will be assigned a date, a time, and the discussion questions/topics/areas of concern for the facilitation session in advance.

Each of them must have 5 minute pre-session and after session individual meetings with the instructor to develop a plan for their up-coming facilitation, receive consultations and get feedback.

Each of them must write description of flipcharts and discussion summaries of their facilitation sessions that will include: the main points of the discussion (maximum one paragraph), their comments/reflection (maximum two paragraphs), flip charts notes. Facilitator should send the discussion summaries to the rest of the class and to the instructor the next day after his/her facilitation.

Participants are discussing the various issues and the specific ways of their improvement within the European Union.

Suggested questions for the discussions and for the exploration of main concerns of EU focuses on present processes of policy-making and implementation at supranational level as well as national level.

Each class has a more or less similar format (so-called seminar-lecture format). Readings have to be done before every class. At the beginning of the class 10-15 minutes are given to discuss main questions that students believe are important regarding the assigned article reviews. After brief discussion professor moves on to the lecture part, during which he/she identifies main issues related to the topic of the day. Participation of the student is an integral part of his/her final academic standing, therefore active students have better chances of receiving higher grade, then passive ones.

Before the start of the course each student receives a reader, which includes copies of all texts necessary in advance. All the books are provided by the lecturer from his/her personal library or can be found in particular the IES Library. Moreover, file and assignment sharing electronic system is in force, probably in one of the online fora, like yahoo groups. Students are required to sign up to the yahoo groups account and view part of their assignments on line. All the article reviews are located on line and could be accessed by the students any time. Assignments (article reviews) have to be submitted online by 18:00 the day before the class. No excuses regarding the late submissions are accepted.

At the same time Professor may use several methods enumerated above according to the necessities and complexities of the courses taught.
